TUTORVISTA OFFERS INSTANT LIVE TUTORING
Immediate assistance available from any computer

Baltimore – June 22, 2007 – TutorVista, the leading online tutoring and test preparation provider, today announced availability of their new proprietary TutorVistaNow chat and whiteboard software, which gives students instant access to live online tutoring without cumbersome software downloads.

Academicians have long felt that tutoring right when the student has a question is more useful than delayed tutoring¹. With TutorVistaNow software, students can ask questions of expert tutors and immediately receive detailed answers and/or explanation through text-based chat and an interactive whiteboard.

TutorVistaNow makes online tutoring available to students who use public computers in schools and libraries. Because TutorVistaNow does not require unwieldy software installation or plug-ins, it is easily accessible from any computer with Internet access.

TutorVista President Dr. John Stuppy explained: “Today, TutorVista services can be delivered in libraries, schools and other settings where installing software and voice communication may be disallowed. The new whiteboard and chat software loads quickly—and is now the fastest way for student and tutor to connect.”

According to a survey conducted by Zogby International, an overwhelming 75 percent of Americans believe that tutoring can help all students, and 92 percent feel that tutelage offered by public schools is insufficient in meeting students’ academic needs. TutorVista’s unlimited high-quality tutoring is available to students everywhere for the affordable flat monthly fee of $99.99.

Students can experience a free 20-minute tutoring session using TutorVistaNow by logging on to www.tutorvista.com/now.
